Dear Mr. Weisberg:

I have recently finished reading your four book series (Whitewash I-IV) which I ordered from your publishing company in December, 1989.

I have read many books and articles about the assassination of President Kennedy, but without doubt, the" Whitewash" series must be considered among the most important, if not the most important books written on the subject.

I was only eight years old when President Kennedy was killed, and like so many other people, I can vividly recall where I was, what I was doing, and many of the events that followed that weekend. I saw Lee Harvey Oswald murdered on live television that Sunday, and though I hated the man for what he allegedly had done, I distinctly remember thinking that if he died, how will we really know if he assassinated the President?

As the years passed, I carried with me a deep personal belief that something wasn't right, something was being kept from us regarding the events surrounding the assassination.

I kept up with newspaper and magazine articles concerning the assassination, and though I was aware of the important research being done, I was too involved in other things to really make a serious attempt to study the material.

The first book that I actually read on the assassination was "Best Evidence" by David Lifton. It shocked me. Since then, I have read everything that I can get my hands on. I spend alot of time in used book stores hoping to find out-of-print books on the subject, and I have recently begun writing to researchers, yourself and Penn Jones Jr. being the first. I was grateful to get a response from you so quickly, and I immediately placed an order for the "Whitewash" series, and "Post Mortem". So far, I have not heard from Mr. Jones, but remain hopeful.

Mr. Weisberg, I feel as though I have gone well beyond the "sensationalist" attitude of studying the assassination. I wish to study any material that can shine light on this subject. I am firmly convinced that until we have an answer to this awful crime, I cannot listen to anything the government tells me and believe that they are being honest

Concerning my own personal research, any correspondence, suggestions or direction from you would be greatly appreciated.

In closing, I simply wish to thank you for your dedication to this research. Through the efforts of people like yourself, hopefully we may gain insight and understanding of the world in which we live.

Respectfully,

Joseph LoCascio
